

Marilyn Monroe - Played by Natalie

As the beautiful star whose looks were evident early, you were thrust upon the silver screen at a young age—but you were no natural. Over the years, you have worked hard to overcome your stage fright with no success. Since no one has really taken you seriously, you long to truly fit in with the talented stars.

When your birth mother unexpectedly passed away five years ago and left you an untold fortune, you were instantly wealthy. Wanting to be taken seriously in spite of your inheritance, you threw a very elaborate post-Oscar bash. The party was a success and over the past few years, the event has grown in popularity and exclusivity—and you intend to keep that way.

While you groom your guest list quite carefully, there are a few guests you would prefer not to be in attendance. Among those people are actress Natalie Wood, aspiring singer Frank Sinatra, and Eddie Fisher, a once-famous singer who is trying to revive a lackluster film career. While Natalie is talented, she is also conniving, self-centered, and insists on being the center of attention. Since you consider this to be your night to shine, you do not wish to share the limelight with Natalie.

Additionally, Frank Sinatra was added to the guest list at the insistence of actress Judith (Judy) Garland. As the wife of the famous director Billy Wilder, Judith wields a great deal of power in Hollywood and you fear crossing her. You are unclear why Judith would demand Frank Sinatra be included, but you intend to find out.

Lastly, Eddie Fisher made it onto your guest list even though you consider him a “has-been” star. With a comeback in the works, Eddie’s career may be revived in the near future. If his musical production, Jersey Boy Dreamers, does become the big hit he is boasting it will be, you will certainly want to be in his favor! With the Academy Award Show quickly approaching, you are more excited than ever for your post-Oscar bash! It will be a night of glitz and glamour and you love to get credit for the good time that everyone will have.
